"MUMMY WHEAT"

Our Research Department has been able to obtain a small quantity of genuine ancient dynastic Egyptian "Mummy" wheat from Sir Ernest Wallis Budge, late keeper of antiquities, British Museum. This wheat is 3,100 years old at least. The Dominion Seed Branch Laboratories, Winnipeg, submitted part of the sample to a very careful germination test. After six days the kernels disintegrated into dust and mould, proving once again that genuine ancient Egyptian wheat taken from tombs will not grow. A photograph of seedlings and kernels of this "Mummy" wheat will be forwarded to any interested farmer. Write to the Research Department.

SYNOPSIS

"You're fallen heir to a half-share in plenty of trouble," the lawyer told Gerald Kane. "The Broken Spur mine has been systematically looting the ranch, and old Joe Carr, your partner, is drinking himself into ruin."

Dad Kane, desert rat and luckless prospector till now is returning to Edith and Spike Goddard, owners of the Broken Spur mine, who had grabbed him, of his discovery of a rich gold mine, and shows samples of the ore. He needs Broken Spur men rustling Hour-glass cattle for protection against it.

Dustin unexpectedly comes along and seeing them, stops and talks to Edith. He mentions the 800-acre dispute could be settled by marrying him, and Edith refuses his proposal with remarks that make Dustin furious. He insults Stone, who promptly throws him into a pool of water.

Stone, Edith's brother, the herman, about his meeting with Dustin, and is warned that Dustin would kill him if he got the chance. Stone and Crewe go to Seco to send a telegram to Gerald Kane. While at Seco an attempt is made to kill Stone, who proves more than a match for his enemies.

Dustin learns that Gerald Kane has been sent for, and also that Duro Stone has been the Broken Spur men rustling Carr's cattle. He sets out with Dad Kane to learn the location of his gold discovery and apprehend its value. Dad Kane shows Dustin the mine and samples of the rich ore he took from it.

They go back to camp, and Dustin shows Kane. He then shows Dustin on Puyet Ridge, a drug addict, who, stung by the narcotic he has taken, did not know whether he was guilty or not. They bury Kane and then return to the Broken Spur ranch (Now Go On With The Story)

"I thought he was lying about having lost that notebook," he muttered quietly. "It's just barely possible that Corse or Gray may have found it. I'll have to find out that. Anyhow Peyott will never tell what took place up here."

He knew that he was perfectly safe. Though old Kane was fairly well known in Seco yet at times he had been gone more than two years without exciting comment.

"I'm the only one who knows about this find," muttered Dustin. "And it's a cinch now that no one will tell about Corse and Gray rustling the Hour-glass stuff. Come on here, Peyott," he shouted. "Give a hand here."

Together they carried the limp figure to the narrow trench and laid him at rest under the desert stars. After a coyote on a distant, wind-bitten ridge sent up a wailing howl as Peyott sunk off to the fire and shivered under the flames. Two hours later they got their ponies and headed slowly back for the yellowing foothills under the rising sun.

CHAPTER X.

That telegram from Gerald Kane caused hot debate at the Sev-enth Heaven of anticipation. The nephew of his old partner, himself half-owner of the ranch, could be no less than help.

He held conference after conference with Crewe and Stone, because of his alleged intimacy with Gerald Kane, was called into those meetings. Plan after plan was suggested by the fere-elyed-out cattleman.

"I know that's got his knife out for me," he said. "I tell his gang of thieves has been stealing me dead, dumb or blind but I got no proof."

"You've got your own way," he said. "You've been 'cattin' me for me," he said. "I tell his gang of thieves has been stealing me dead, dumb or blind but I got no proof."

"Sure. Go ahead," he said cheerfully.

"Where did you come from and how did you happen to land on the House?" You know Mr. Keene pretty well, don't you? You must know him well for him to have given you the letter that he did."

"He owns a big garage in Cato," he said non-committally. "That's where I saw him last. I've known him a good many years. When I learned about the ranch, I got him to give me the letter but when I got here the Hour-glass happened to need a man and I didn't need to use the letter."

"Did you work for Mr. Keene at the garage?"

"For a while, yes."

"Don't say 'Ma'am' to me," she said sharply.

"What'll I say then?"

"You might try 'Edith,'" she laughed. "Most of the other men."

"All right M... I mean Edith to find it. Corse and Gray may not let it go at that and they let their horses out over the level. That long, treeless mesa swept away in miles after miles of pleasant grass-land led here and there with stunted mesquite and fire-tipped oaks and it pitched slightly up till its hedge was some four feet high."

"Up Red Water to Stinkin' Water. Funny names they gave the places," muttered Stone.

"You know them well and was versed in the legends of the land. They call the next deep valley Stinking Water because of its sulphurous gases rising on the wind many years ago. Even sheep don't drink the water there."

"Now what?"

"Their ponds paved at the yellowed soil and scornfully snide aside the water in the shallow pools."

"Up the valley seven or eight miles," he said reflectively. "To a white birch... Then up Stinkin' Water three to a suck can."

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Aline Michaels

TWILIGHT

This is the loneliest, loveliest hour. With dying day a fading flower; soft shadows creep on the dim. As slowly on the screen sweep Strange shapes and sounds of other lands.

And music, not from earthly bands. And might slanting through the wood Show it in strange theatre mood. The very trees that heard our vows, Untried with sunset in its boughs.

"I'll sing with you," she said quickly. "You don't want to take one of the men of course. Anyhow, they're all out. But I mean to go."

His eyes twinkled and found hers. He knew instantly that no distrust underlay her words. There was a lightness to her eyes and a quick smile on her lips that forbade any thought of guile. His own quick smile replied to hers.

"I'll sing with you," she said. "If you care to come," he said. "I'll get your pony, Miss Edith."

In ten minutes he was back with his big fast horse and her pony and they clattered off in the enclosure, past the corals and turned into the open trail that led westward toward the foothills. Crewe and Carr stood watching them till their figures were swallowed up by the red dust.

"There's something damn funny about that man Stone," quoth Crewe. "I'm satisfied he's as straight as they make 'em but he's sure something different from what he give out."

"He hasn't given out anything," growled Carr. "All I get is a notion of a husky fellow. He's never been range-trained. Anybody can see that he's willing and he wants to learn."

"Of course he's a fool," goes into the cattle business. To do that a man's got to have money to start it and if he's got money he's a double-dyed damned fool to get his money in any game that he don't know thoroughly. See?"

Crewe saw more than Carr. He saw more than Carr saw and he stood staring out over the flat at Edith and Stone as they turned westward and followed the tortuous line of wire-fence to the west.

Edith, too, wondered a great deal about her companion. He could ride. She knew that he was not afraid of any one or as far as she saw of anything, but that might be the result of ignorance, but his lamentable ignorance of all ranch matters was almost laughable at times. She half-turned in her saddle as his horse swept up alongside the girl of her own age.

You've been with us at the Hour-glass long enough for me to ask you some questions, haven't you? I know in his gray eyes might have told him that those questions were not altogether prompted by idle curiosity.

DON'T RISK BAKING FAILURES . . .

"DON'T TAKE CHANCES WITH INFERIOR BAKING POWDER. LESS THAN 1¢ WORTH OF MAGIC MAKES A FINE, BIG CAKE. AND MAGIC ALWAYS GIVES GOOD RESULTS."

Little Helps For This Week

"Pier not those things which thou shalt suffer . . . Ye shall have tribulation ten days; be thou faithful unto death and I will give thee a crown of life." Revelations 2:10.

Then O my soul be not afraid, On Him who made me and all things made. Do thou all calmly rest; What ever may come, what ever may go. Our Father in the heavens must guide. In all things what is best.

Guide me O Lord in all changes and varieties of the world, that in all things that shall happen I may have an evenness and tranquillity of spirit; that my soul may be wholly resigned to Thy divest will and pleasure, never murmuring at Thy given chastenments and fatherly correction.

Thus are never at any time nearer to God than when under tribulation which is the power for the purification and beautifying of thy soul.

FIRE PREVENTION AWAITS

Activities of fire prevention week in Canadian cities reached a high degree of efficiency, George F. Lewis, deputy fire marshal of Ontario, said in announcing 1934 awards. Keen competition was shown among fire departments and municipalities throughout the country. Saskatchewan was particularly prominent with five cities of 25,000 population and less taking gradings more than 90 per cent.

Local & General

The annual meeting of the ratepayers of the Champion Consolidated School district will be held in the public school building on Saturday, February 2nd. Nominations will be made to fill vacancies, and by the retirement of James Brown, who is at present chairman of the board of trustees.

A meeting of teachers from Champion, Frasers, Leland, Carmichael, Barons and surrounding districts will be held in Champion in the near future. Owen Williams, B. A., Inspector of Schools, will be the speaker.

K. R. McLean, R.O., of McLean & Anderson, 818 1/2 Street of 224-8th Ave West, Calgary, will make his monthly visit to Champion, Friday Feb. 1st, at the Drug Store.

Total motor vehicle licenses issued in 1934 were 88,497, of which 73,114 were passenger cars and 15,383 were trucks. This is compared with 85,250 in 1933 of which 71,076 were passenger cars and 14,174 were trucks. A good increase for 1934—$2,656,630, compared with $2,322,602 for 1933.

Attention is called to the next regular meeting of the Social Credit club to be held in the dining room of the community hall on Jan. 29th at 8 p.m. Special attraction will be an address by Rev. Peter Dawson.

Attention! O.O.R.P.

The next regular meeting of the O.O.R.P. will be held at the Champion Assembly Hall on Tuesday evening February 5th.
 A good attendance would be appreciated.

DEWILLA BURNELL, Secretary.
